BRANTFORD (BCN) -
 On Dec. 21, thousands gathered in downtown Brantford to witness the Olympic torch relay which concluded with Brantford's own track and field Olympian Kevin Sullivan lighting for a cauldron at city hall.

As part of the celebrations at city hall, various entertainers took the stage, including Toronto based pop-culture artist Jessica Gorlicky, who created a painting on stage.

The painting, "Glowing hearts" was originally given to the local branch of Olympic sponsors RBC, but was today given to Brantford Mayor Mike Hancock.

The 2010 Vancouver Olympics start in 11 days, with the cauldron being lit during the opening ceremonies in the host city on Feb. 12.
